

GOVERNMENT AND NONPROFIT

James Waring has been named chairman of CleanTech, a nonprofit focused on fostering an energy and environmental technology cluster in San Diego. Waring until recently was the deputy chief operating officer for land use and economic development for the city of San Diego. In that position, he oversees real estate assets, development services, neighborhood code compliance and city planning and community reinvestment. Waring has a background in law, real estate asset development and environmental activism.

The Jewish Community Foundation of San Diego has announced the election of four local community and business leaders to its board of directors. Marcia Hazan, Jeffrey Ressler, Sheryl Rowling and Sherron Schuster have started their three-year terms. Hazan is chairwoman of the Jewish Women's Foundation and a board member of the Foster and Galinson family foundations, all entities of the Jewish Community Foundation. Ressler, an attorney, serves on the foundation's grants committee. Rowling serves on the foundation's endowment leadership institute committee and its estate and tax planning council and is the managing partner of Rowling, Dold & Associates LLP. Schuster has served on the boards of Jewish Family Service, Hillel of San Diego and United Jewish Federation.