PHILANTHROPY CLASS

It's not every day that we get to celebrate S.D.'s oldest community foundation and largest grant maker, but when the Jewish Community Foundation throws a grand 40th anniversary celebration, you can consider our RSVP en route. Local philanthropic elite all came out to the Museum of Man for cocktailing, hors-d'oeuvring, and just a bit more desserting, while patrons got a great sneak peek at the MOM's new exhibit, Journey to the Copper Age. But even with a theme of exclusivity, the JCF announced that in their first 39 years, they've given $53 million in grants, and only plan to continue to spread the love. After all, the JCF was born in 1967, same year as the "summer of love." Don't worry, you groovy babes, 40 is so the new 30. —SETH COMBS
