

an excerpt from the book of life

Seth Krosner

*T*he tradition of Tikkun Olam, the repair of the world, is among Judaism's greatest gifts to humanity. My life and my work as a trauma surgeon have been shaped by a culture dedicated to healing the sick, protecting the weak, and providing for the needy.

As I prepared my will, I thought carefully about providing for those I love and for the world they will inherit. I will not be there to ensure the strength of the synagogues, community centers, and agencies. What I can do, and will do through my planned gifts, is help to make sure the Jews of the next generation will have tools to create a vibrant Jewish life for their great-grandchildren. Since I have no children of my own, I see these gifts as my stake in our shared future.
